

AMENDMENTS TO THE SPECIFICATION

Please replace paragraph [0184] with the following:

[0184] The method then proceeds to block 1250, and creates a composition by arranging the information from the various files and web sites, and references to access information within a composition. The composition could form any convenient arrangement of the information. By way of example but not by way of limitation, such arrangements might be in terms of positioning of the various items of information within the composition or the document resulting there from, or in terms of the sequencing of the items relative to other items in the composition or document, or highlighting, colors, and other ways to arrange and display and print the information. The composition may designate, for one item of information accessible from one source, a location or position for that item that is different relative to a location or position designated for another item of information accessible from a different source. In other words, the composition may include data designating the positioning of various items of information where the designated position of one item of information is different relative to the designated position of another item of information.